Top Kicker Out to Boot Nazis Around

Leading Aircraftman Gordon Noseworthy has swapped a rugby helmet for a R.C.A.F. pilot's head-gear. The former Big Four kicking half star of the Montreal team is currently attending Elementary Flying Training School at Windsor Mills, Que. He's been around since joining up as aircrew last February, having received training at Eschinc, St. Hubert and Belleville before his present posting. Gordie was an ace with West Hill High School until graduation in 1937, when he hopped from High School to Big Four rugby and stardom without batting an eyelash. He also did a smart defense show in hockey with the Junior Royals.

The puzzle wasn't exactly a "piece of cake," so Sister had to be called in to help. Sister is Christine Cummings, of Inverness. Dozens of heroes pass through her hands at this Brunel's hospital, but she never bears their stories. Some day she'll tell hers.

NICE WORK, SISTER
